

AN EVENING WITH DICK CLEMENT

moderated by David Gittins

If we had brought in the writers of a Bond movie, a hit West End musical, a DreamWorks animation, a couple of Bruckheimer action movies, numerous iconic sitcoms, an award-winning drama series, and an Emmy-winning HBO show and then added producers of studio movies and directors who've worked with Richard Burton, Kirk Douglas, Trevor Howard, and Michael Caine, we would not have had room for an audience. Fortunately, we brought all this talent together in the form of one man - Dick Clement.

Dick is a British film and television icon who has worked as a writer, producer and director for over fifty years. With his writing partner, Ian La Frenais, he has written international hit movies and created some of Britain's most memorable TV shows - all while living in Los Angeles. Dick is currently working on biopics for both Sam Cooke and The Kinks and has projects in development with companies in the US, UK and in China. His next feature is the animated "Bunyan and Babe."

Dick shared with our writers how he keeps working and reinventing himself, how he works internationally, and how he continues to work across multiple genres and formats.
